Council redrawing district boundaries

City Council introduced two competing bills that change district boundaries Thursday in its first session back from summer recess.

The top priority on Council's agenda is redistricting, which requires the legislative body to redraw boundaries every 10 years to reflect population shifts.

After weeks of discussion and closed-door negotiations, a group of Council members proposed a compromise map that would augment the 7th District, which currently winds through North Philadelphia, Kensington and into the Northeast. The proposal would also divide up the 56th Ward into two districts from the current three.

"(There was) a lot of give and take, and I'm taking a lot and not getting much. But that's part of reality," Councilman Brian O'Neill told KYW Newsradio.

O'Neill

A second proposal from Councilman Frank DiCiccio would put the entire 56th Ward, a Democratic stronghold, in O'Neill's 10th district, a Republican.

Under law, Council must pass a bill by Sept. 22 or go without pay until the issue is resolved. SOLOMON D. LEACH

Chaput takes over after rocky tenure

Archdiocese of Philadelphia installed its ninth archbishop yesterday during a ceremony at Cathedral of Peter and Paul. Many supporters hope for stability after rocky end to Cardinal Justin Rigali's tenure Archbishop Charles Chaput took his position as Philadelphia's new Catholic spiritual leader Thursday in an installation ceremony.

Onlookers gathered in front of the Basilica of Saints Peter and Paul, traveling from as far as Virginia and Connecticut. Some wielded picket signs, others carried instruments and sang songs of praise.

"I feel it is important for us to be out here so the new archbishop sees the support he has from all parts of the church," said Maria Genstorfer, 23, of Plainfield, N.J. Along with many of those gathered, Genstorfer is a member of Neocatechumenal Way, a Catholic organization that emphasizes evangelizing and service.

"We also are here to support the diocese. Many feel that the church is dead and full of old people," said Nick Boynton, 31. "But most of our members are young. They could be out doing anything in the world, but they're here today."

Chaput was previously the Archbishop of Denver and succeeds Cardinal Justin Rigali, who, at 75, has reached the Vatican-favored age of retirement.

"The Catholic Church is an institution that needs support," said Mark Pennington, who runs a transitional living house in Bristol. "I'm here to pray for the archbishop and for the city of Philadelphia."

"It's important to live life helping, not walking around with signs saying someone else should help."

Questioning Chaput

Outside the ceremony in the rain, members of the National Survivor Advocates Coalition and Road to Recovery, Inc. carried signs bearing names and pictures of priest sex abuse victims.

Sex abuse still haunts.

Green: The color of LOVE

CENTER CITY. The iconic fountain at LOVE Park changed to a light green in honor of the upcoming start to the Philadelphia Eagles' season.

The season starts Sunday with a game at St. Louis, where the Rams will host Mike Vick and the rest of what backup quarterback Vince Young described as a "dream team." The downtown park's water color is often dyed to commemorate events. METRO

BPT reform begins again

CITY HALL. Council members Maria Quinones-Sanchez and Bill Green introduced a bill that would reform the city's consistently admonished business privilege tax, which critics describe as discouraging to economic growth in Philadelphia.

Under the proposal, there would be an exemption from the gross receipts and net income parts of the tax for the first $100,000 of receipts of all businesses. METRO/SDL

Pa. on high alert thanks to flooding

► Gov. Corbett coincidentally raised state emergency level to highest since 9/11 ► Six of SEPTA's Regional Rail lines suspended until this morning at the earliest

The Delaware Valley and much of the Northeast continued to get walloped by the one-two punch from Hurricane Irene and the latest storm as flooding caused road closures, mass transit delays and evacuations all across the region.

The flooding closed several roadways Thursday morning and afternoon, including portions of Roosevelt Boulevard and Interstate 76, resulting in a headache for commuters. SEPTA was forced to suspend service on six of its Regional Rail lines until Friday due to high water and debris. The devastation in centhe 9/11 terrorist attacks.

Roughly 100,000 people were evacuated in the Wilkes-Barre area, and at least three deaths had been attributed to the storm as of Thursday, officials said.

"We face a public health emergency, because sewage treatment plants are underwater and no longer working," Corbett said from the Pennsylvania Emergency Management Agency headquarters in Harrisburg. "Flood water is toxic and polluted. If you don't have to be in it, keep out."

Traffic snarled with roads underwater

Many of the city's main thoroughfares and highways led commuters in western and northwestern parts of the city, as well as from suburbs, to take up to a couple hours Thursday morning for what are normally 15- to 30-minute drives. From a mudslide on the Schuylkill Expressway to detours on Roosevelt Boulevard, drivers were still reeling by Thursday night as they headed home. METRO

Jobs plan includes tax cuts, spending

► Obama hopes American Jobs Act will be OK'd by end of the year ► Says it's time to end the 'political circus'

President Barack Obama said on Thursday the United States faces a "national crisis" and pressed Congress to urgently pass a jobs package of tax cuts and government spending he is proposing to revive the stalled economy.

The cost of Obama's plan would be $447 billion, a Senate Democratic aide told Reuters.

With his poll numbers at new lows amid voter frustration with 9.1 percent unemployment, Obama was poised to use a high-stakes address to Congress to pitch a sweeping economic plan that is critical to his re-election chances but he faces an uphill fight with Republicans.

"It will provide a jolt to an economy that has stalled and give companies confidence that if they invest and hire there will be customers for their products and services. You should pass this jobs plan right away," Obama said in a televised speech.

Taking aim at Republicans who have consistently opposed his initiatives, Obama said it was time to "stop the political circus and actually do something to help the economy."

Obama, who pushed through an $800 billion economic stimulus package in 2009, said his American Jobs Act would cut taxes for workers and businesses and put more construction workers and teachers on the job through infrastructure projects. REUTERS

100 million active users on Twitter

SAN FRANCISCO. Only about half of Twitter's 200 million-plus registered members log on daily, but the microblogging website is chalking up growth of 40 percent every quarter in mobile device usage, Chief Executive Dick Costolo said on Thursday.

Twitter, one of a coterie of Internet social networking services like Facebook and Google Inc.'s embryonic "Google+", is gearing up for a hotly anticipated initial public offering. But Costolo told reporters they would do so only on their own terms.

"We want to be able to remain independent, grow the business the way we want to and not be beholden to public markets until we feel like we want to be," Costolo said at Twitter's offices. REUTERS

Scientists find gene controlling chronic pain

LONDON. British scientists have identified a gene responsible for regulating chronic pain, called HCN2, and say their discovery should help drug researchers in their search for more effective, targeted pain-killing medicines.

Scientists from Cambridge University said that if drugs could be designed to block the protein produced by the gene, they could treat a type of pain known as neuropathic pain, which is linked to nerve damage and often very difficult to control with currently available drugs.

"Individuals suffering from neuropathic pain often have little or no respite because of the lack of effective medications," said Peter McNaughton of Cambridge's pharmacology department, who led the study. REUTERS

NOT JUST BARBECUE COMING FROM TEXAS

Opinion

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

If I were President Obama, I'd be worried about Rick Perry. Not because he has shot up in polls like a cork-bobber in a catfish pond. Not because he has excited some corners of the Republican Party more than Michele Bachmann running a charter bus to the Cracker Barrel. But rather, because he is from Texas.

The Lone Star State has long played an outsized role in national politics. For reasons that resist full explanation (much like the career of Carrot Top), Texas has produced a steady supply of political players who have no qualms about strolling into the White House, kicking their boots up onto the desk and declaring, "By doggie, I lahk this 'ere round office. Think I'll git me one!"

Eisenhower, Johnson, and of course both Bushes claimed Texas roots, meaning that since World War II, one third of our nation's chief executives have come from the land on the Brazos. A thundering herd of and New York have produced more presidents overall, but you have to go way back in history to round up all those names; and seriously, does anyone even care about the Hayes administration anymore?

We can figure some of the reasons for The Texas Effect. It has one of the largest state economies in the country, one of the largest populations and only California has more electoral votes.

But the prime reason Texans seem so good at commanding national attention, I think, is that they are crazy. I mean this in the most flattering way. Texans think big and bold. They have outsized dreams, and they don't hesitate to pursue them, even when conventional wisdom tells them they should, much like Barack Obama in the last presidential race.

None of this means Rick Perry will win the election — or even his party's nomination. But you can bet your jingly spurs that he'll make the race more interesting. Texans always do.

Fashion icon is fined for anti-semitic slurs

► John Galliano has been convicted by a French court for statements disparaging Jews ► Analysis: Can the ex-Dior head continue his career?

6,000 euros — that's the price disgraced fashion designer John Galliano will have to pay for anti-semitic slurs uttered at the La Perle bar in Paris.

The court decided to "impose on him a penalty of a suspended fine, so the fine will not actually have to be paid," his lawyer, Aurélien Hamelle, said on Thursday. The former creative director for the Dior fashion house will, however, have to pay a symbolic one-euro fine to each of the victims who have been insulted and to each of the five local associations that took civil action.

"An icon has been debunked, and it was all his fault," reacted Yves Bedouk, attorney of one of the victims. "And that's the real price for him."

Hamelle thanked the court at the Palais de Justice. "The court here took into account ... the fact that he was sick at the time of the event of a triple addiction to alcohol. Now Mr. Galliano is ... looking forward to the future and hope that people will, with time, understand and forgive."

METRO WORLD NEWS IN PARIS

What's next?

In fashion, timing is everything. So the irony is lost on no one that John Galliano's guilty verdict for a series of racist rants was announced on the first day of the Spring/Summer '12 ready-to-wear shows.

► This happened just days after Karl Lagerfeld endorsed Marc Jacobs as Galliano's replacement at Dior in an exclusive interview with Metro. Clearly, fashion has moved on.
► But the question is, will Galliano do the same? Judging by the number of sympathetic stories about his downfall, the answer is yes. He may never head another couture house, but the majority of the fashion world's top editors, stylists and corporates will forgive him. Many already have, coming to his defense with sound bites about how he isn't normally an anti-Semite (is it possible to turn that on and off?)

► And presumably, shoppers will pardon him too. His wedding dress for Kate Moss, featured in American Vogue, was a blogosphere hit. • MWN/KH

► John Galliano walks the runway for Christian Dior during the Paris Haute Couture Fashion Week Spring/Summer 2011.

MESSAGES OF REMEMBRANCE

► Words matter ► Those of ordinary Americans have filled Metro's pages as we mark the 10th anniversary of the 9/11 attacks ► But at times of national crisis, it is often the words of our leaders that matter most ► Here, they reflect on a decade that changed America

ALEX WIGGLESWORTH
awigglesworth@metro.us

FROM POLITICAL LEADERS

"[Sept. 11] is very complicated because it was the worst day in my life, worst day in the life of my city — to some extent, I imagine, the country or pretty close to the worst day for the country. And in some ways it was the greatest day, the most glorious day because of the display of bravery and fortitude and strength that people showed. ... Everyone remembers where they were when the attack on the twin towers and on Washington and over the skies of Pa. happened. ... It is a defining event for us; and right now, as we enter into the second decade of the 21st century, it's the most defining event — and it's had tremendous implications for us, and it's having implications for us that we still don't quite understand."

RUDOLPH GIULIANI, FORMER NEW YORK CITY MAYOR

"This Sunday, as we reflect back on the past, let us remember not only the agony and anguish of the attacks but how we channeled our pain into something positive and powerful. Let us remember not only the day that time stood still — but the decade we have spent recovering, rebuilding and renewing. Let us remember not only how the towers fell, but how we rose up — determined to defend our freedoms. And let us remember that when we unite as Americans, and when we put patriotism ahead of partisanship, there is no challenge that this country can't meet. That — that is the ultimate lesson of our past decade. And I believe the ultimate way we can honor those we lost is to apply that lesson to all the challenges our nation faces. So that the legacy of 9/11 will be felt not just here in Lower Manhattan but across each and every one of our 50 states for decades and centuries to come."

NEW YORK CITY MAYOR MICHAEL BLOOMBERG

"As we approach the 10th anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, the safety and security of the American public remains our highest priority. While threats remain, our nation is stronger than it was on 9/11, more prepared to confront evolving threats and more resilient than ever before. ... Homeland security is a shared responsibility, and everyone plays an important role in helping to keep our communities safe and secure. We remind our federal, state [and] local partners, and the public, to remain vigilant and to report any suspicious activity to local law enforcement authorities."

JANET NAPOLITANO, SECRETARY OF HOMELAND SECURITY

"I think no one has lost sight of fact this is the final resting place of 40 heroes, and they'll be there forever. This is their sacred ground. ... You never know when you'll be called on to do an act of courage, but in the meantime, we can do little acts every day. These passengers gave the last measure of their lives for people in Washington. Continually and to this day, I will be always moved by what they did and their sacrifice."

GENE STILP, FLIGHT 93 MEMORIAL ACTIVIST

911.METRO.US

YOUR SITE FOR 9/11 NEWS
ADD YOUR OWN TRIBUTE AND MEMORIES

From the president

"This Sept. 11, Michelle and I will join the commemorations at Ground Zero, in Shanksville and at the Pentagon. But even if you can't be in New York, Pennsylvania or Virginia, every American can be part of this anniversary. Once again, 9/11 will be a National Day of Service and Remembrance. And in the days and weeks ahead, folks across the country — in all 50 states — will come together, in their communities and neighborhoods, to honor the victims of 9/11 and to reaffirm the strength of our nation with acts of service and charity. ... Even the smallest act of service, the simplest act of kindness, is a way to honor those we lost; a way to reclaim that spirit of unity that followed 9/11. On this 10th anniversary, we still face great challenges as a nation. We're emerging from the worst economic crisis in our lifetimes. We're taking the fight to al-Qaeda, ending the war in Iraq and starting to bring our troops home from Afghanistan. And we're working to rebuild the foundation of our national strength here at home. None of this will be easy. And it can't be the work of government alone. As we saw after 9/11, the strength of America has always been the character and compassion of our people. So as we mark this solemn anniversary, let's summon that spirit once more. And let's show that the sense of common purpose that we need in America doesn't have to be a fleeting moment. It can be a lasting virtue — not just on one day, but every day."

PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA

From a service leader

"As firefighters and emergency medical personnel, we deal with a crisis as it happens. We pull people out of burning buildings, we administer first aid, we get their hearts beating again. We deal with the first wave of trauma. Mental health professionals are there for the second wave of trauma. They are the ones who come in and help after we've gone home. They help with the problems that are not visible to the naked eye — suffered both by victims and first responders. These problems might seem less critical, but they are actually harder to deal with, and they don't disappear in a day." FDNY COMMISSIONER SALVATORE J. CASSANO, ON MHA-NYC'S 9/11 HEALING AND REMEMBRANCE PROJECT

From a former president

"Sept. the 11 was a monumental day in our nation's history. It was a significant day and it obviously changed my presidency. I went from being a president that was primarily focused on domestic issues to a wartime president, something I never anticipated nor something I ever wanted to be. I had been notified that a plane hit the World Trade Center. At first I thought it was a light aircraft and my reaction was, man, either the weather was bad or something extraordinary happened to the pilot. I then informed some of my staff members to provide help to New York City, whatever help they needed to take care of this incident and then walked into the classroom. The classroom was full of kids who were reading. And in the back of the classroom was a full press corps and staffers and some adults and I'm intently listening to the lesson. And I felt a presence behind me. And Andy Cards's Massachusetts accent was whispering in my ear, 'A second plane has hit the second tower. America is under attack.'"

FROM RELIGIOUS LEADERS

"This anniversary offers us an opportunity to reflect the values of the God to whom we have given our allegiance. Let us remember those who were lost and memorialize this day by committing our lives to 'the things that make for peace' — drawing closer to those who suffer, cultivating understanding in the midst of suspicion, finding truth in the arguments of those with whom we disagree, embracing some measure of personal sacrifice today to make a better world for our children and grandchildren tomorrow. Let us gather one decade from now — not amidst the ruins of all that has been torn down — but in the midst of that new world of peace and security for all, which we have built up together." PAX CHRISTI USA

"9/11 impacted the American Muslim community in two ways. The attacks were on our country and faith. As we grieved for the lives of the innocent, we had to deal with our faith being tarnished. It has been a challenge for many Muslims; however, 9/11 did start a national conversation about Islam's place in America. After 10 years, I am confident that the conversation has reinforced our nation's pluralism."

RUGIATU CONTEH, OUTREACH AND COMMUNICATIONS DIRECTOR, COUNCIL ON AMERICAN-ISLAMIC RELATIONS, PHILADELPHIA CHAPTER

"As the Tenth Anniversary of the 9/11 attacks approaches, Jewish individuals and families will join others in various communal observances and memorials. The death and devastation of Sept. 11 impacted people of virtually every religious and ethnic background, and so it is certainly fitting that we come together across social divisions and join one another in remembering and affirming our kinship. ... not only took thousands of innocent lives but impacted millions of people. One cannot, in fact, begin to adequately quantify the fallout after the evil of that day — psychologically, spiritually, socially, economically, politically, etc. Life has continued — there have been joyous moments, creative achievements, scientific advances and so much more over this decade — but it is not wrong to reflect on the attacks on 9/11 as a human — a devastation — and to reach into our past for tools to approach the present."

"Ten years ago, members of al-Qaeda used four passenger aircraft as weapons to kill nearly 3,000 people on Sept. 11, 2001. The United States government's response was to answer violence with violence. In the ensuing wars, hundreds of thousands more people have been killed. New York Yearly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) urges everyone to recognize this anniversary as an occasion to remember that there are always alternatives to violence and that there is a Spirit in every human being, which responds with gratitude to these alternatives. ... We testify to the world that we disown all wars and fighting with outward weapons for any cause whatsoever. These are never necessary. There are no "just wars." Among the weapons we renounce are the tongue and the pen, when these are used to provoke prejudice and hatred. Neither will we be silenced by fear when we are called to witness against evil masquerading as good. We seek to build a world in which a just peace is possible." RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS (QUAKERS), NEW YORK YEARLY MEETING

► A view from the executive offices of the Department of Veterans Affairs in Washington D.C., shows the White House in the foreground and a cloud of smoke billowing from the Pentagon after it was attacked on Sept. 11, 2001.

I awoke to a day like any other, save for the fact that it was my birthday. I left for work a little later than normal. In the car I nonchalantly tuned the radio to the station on which I depend to navigate my way through the notorious traffic of Washington, D.C. As I approached the city, the news flash of the crash at the first of the twin towers hit the airwaves. I immediately felt a sense of dread and thought it was a terrorist act even while the announcer called it a freak accident.

Subdued and anxious, I hurried to my military duty station in Washington and arrived shortly after the second strike. All entrances and exits to the base were sealed for security purposes soon after. My co-workers and I could see smoke billowing in the distance from the direction of the U.S. Capitol building, and we heard reports of another incoming plane, but communication lines were clogged and we weren't able to send or receive calls.

Not long after, our commanding officer addressed the troops. He said that life as we had known it had been forever changed. Our nation would never be able to go back to the innocent times we had enjoyed before this day. Listening to him was a surreal experience, but facing the horror directly gave us a common purpose.

Eventually, the base was opened and personnel were allowed to go home. Our family trickled home, changed people with no interest in celebrating birthdays, only shock at the events of the day. Seeking comfort that dark night, I walked outside and looked up into the eerily still and silent sky.

calls. "And then we realized that we might be next." Rumors soon swirled that the White House and the State Department had been attacked. Government workers were soon told to go home as heavily armed police cordoned off the area, backed up by helicopters and armed vehicles. "It was frightening walking past the White House, seeing people run out and people moving everyone," says Payne.

This started his walk home — shared by tens of thousands of other Washington workers who had no other way of reaching their homes. "I stopped in [upscale neighborhood] Georgetown, where the bars were open. They were packed with people watching the news on TV." Then, crossing over the bridge, he saw the smoke rising from the Pentagon. "9/11 was our Pearl Harbour moment," he reflects. "We knew we had enemies and knew they could be unconventional, but who could have expected this? We used to think we were insulated from violence."

My son's due date was on 9/11, and I was at a court hearing trying to get a case continued so I could attend the birth of my son. A few minutes before 9 a.m., I was listening to a Miami DJ talk about an "airplane accident" in New York, but I had to rush into the courthouse to be at the hearing on time.

I remember visiting Ground Zero for the first time when I moved to NYC, a group broke out into the national anthem, and it really hit me how much this single event impacted all of us. It will continue to reverberate forever and we won't forget those that were lost to this tragedy.

[I] was sick that day laying in bed. Mother called me to turn on the news, at that moment the second plane crashed into the tower. [I] continued to watch for several days. Just remember how close everyone became to each other during those weeks and months after. I live an hour west of Shanksville Pa., I remember hearing fighter jets scramble over my house on that night. Will be a scar forever.

Luisa Caro-Taveras

I can remember that morning, as if it were yesterday ... and the days that followed, how hope became despair and then hope again; when strangers became friendly faces and we all shared the same pain and the same strength. All those beautiful souls watch over us now.

I remember I was only in eighth grade when it happened. I grew up in the aftermath of 9/11. What an eerie day. I remember my dad told me on 9/11 "look at the TV screen ... because by the end of the week that image will be branded in there forever." I can still close my eyes and picture it.

I remember getting out of the shower and thinking that some "pilot" had made a terrible wrong decision. I still remember going to my office in Mexico and crying as I continued to watch the coverage with huge speculation and looking to make some sense out of the unthinkable. My heart went out and continues to go out to all of the families. The amazing display of courage and solidarity is the only lesson I can find in this great tragedy.

Never Forget my brother Charles Frances Xavier Heeran (Tower 1, Cantor Fitzgerald.)

GOD BLESS all the 9/11 Families. I lost my brother when I was a junior in college ... hard to believe it will be 10 years! My wish is to have one more conversation with him to tell him I love him. I would never in my life think this would happen to my family. This has changed me so much. LIVE, LAUGH & LOVE! NEVER FORGET!

Matt Damon goes
VIRAL

► Actor's latest film, 'Contagion,' covers a global outbreak of a mysterious illness
► The director, Steven Soderbergh, sent him the script saying: 'Read this and then wash your hands'

Review

'The Fighter' Part Deux

'Warrior'

Director: Gavin O'Connor

Stars: Joel Edgerton, Tom Hardy

Rating: PG-13

Grade: A++

Being billed as this year's "The Fighter," mixed martial arts drama "Warrior" pits estranged brothers against each other as they surge through the ranks of a multimillion-dollar fighting championship. Though that sounds like an attempt at selling cinematic brutality to jacked-up MMA fans, director Gavin O'Connor ("Miracle") spins a emotionally intense story that delves into family dysfunction and forgiveness despite its predictable arc and bloated running time. STEVE GOW

While working for Steven Soderbergh is an easy choice for Matt Damon — the two have teamed up on the three "Oceans" movies, "Che" and "The Informant!" — the eclectic director's pitch for their latest collaboration, "Contagion," gave Damon pause. "He sent it over to me with a note saying, 'Read this and then wash your hands,'" Damon remembers.

The warning was well-founded, though, as "Contagion" covers some nerve-rattling subject matter: A new virus quickly spreads throughout the world, quickly becoming an epidemic, while scientists and doctors race to find a cure and governments work to keep society from falling apart. What surprised Soderbergh the most about the film was how easy it was to get made. "Everyone felt there was a place for an ultra-realistic film about this subject. Nobody hesitated," the director says. "It all happened very quickly — uncharacteristically quickly, actually, considering what the business is right now for adult dramas."

Working on the movie hasn't had much impact on Damon's disaster preparedness. He's always been bad about stuff like that. "After the Northridge quake, I put the flashlight by my bed for like two weeks and then forgot about it," he admits. Now that he's a parent, however, some of his behavior has certainly changed. "I'm probably more protective than I've ever been now that I have children," he says. "My wife's name for me is 'Red Alert.' I sometimes just check to see if the kids are breathing."

As for Soderbergh, working on "Contagion" certainly has made him much more aware of the microscopic dangers around him. "I don't know if my behavior has changed. I'm just really aware of it now," he says. "I was handed some lip balm by one of the makeup people — which I took a Kleenex and cleaned off, but who knows if that worked. So don't get near my mouth. Having gone through it, I'm always going to be conscious of it now."

Fear the germs

Taking the movie out into the world has produced some surprisingly entertaining moments — even if they are at the audience's expense. "It was fun during the preview to watch the lights come up and 400 people realize that they're next to a bunch of strangers and that they've touched everything," Soderbergh says, a mischievous glint in his eye. "You could tell they weren't happy."

All-star disaster

Damon is only one part of the massive, big-name cast Soderbergh assembled for "Contagion," making it something like a brainier descendent of the star-studded disaster films of the 1970s like "The Poseidon Adventure" and "The Towering Inferno." Playing Damon's wife — and Patient Zero — is Gwyneth Paltrow, while their "The Talented Mr. Ripley" co-star, Jude Law, pops up as an opportunistic blogger. On the disease-fighting side, Marion Cotillard plays a World Health Organization investigator, while Kate Winslet and Laurence Fishburne's CDC officials work stateside. For Fishburne, the appeal of the project was simple. "I was blown away by how smart it was, because a lot of what is being made now is kind of stupid," he says.

Following their bliss

► Brooklyn band takes a cue from Bowie to explore the place where pop and the avant-garde meet

Don't be deceived by the infectious off-kilter pop melodies and bizarro-world Hall and Oates falsettos; there's a lot more going on with NewVillager than meets the ear. The Brooklyn-based duo of Ross Simonini and Ben Bromley (along with newly added third member, Collin Palmer) expand beyond the boundaries of their self-titled art-synthpop debut to encompass art installations (recently curating the show "Temporary Culture" at L.A.'s Human Resources Gallery) and visually sumptuous videos.

If that's not complicated enough, all of this work is tied together by the band's self-created mythology, an ever-evolving grand idea that draws from influences as diverse as Joseph Campbell and Michael Jackson.

"In the same way that music has sonata form and painting has a landscape form, there's a recurring mythology form that everything from ancient Hindu mythology to 'The Princess Bride' follows," according to Simonini. "We eventually came to our own manifestation of the form that can connect everything that we do, even if it's very different on the surface."

These sorts of big ideas more frequently turn up in experimental art circles, but Simonini and Bromley knew from the moment they began working together in 2006 that they wanted to express themselves through pop music.

"People like David Bowie have connected these avant-garde ideas to pop music before," Simonini says, "but not many artists are working on this level. It was interesting to approach some of these ideas and connect them with music that is immediately, palpably satisfying." —SHAUN BRADY

When the sitar met the saxophone

► "The study of tabla and Northern Indian classical music has influenced my approach when I play in any kind of situation," says Weiss.

► Armed with tabla rhythms, jazz artist Dan Weiss continues to incorporate Indian music into the genre

Ever since John Coltrane heard Ravi Shankar and began incorporating the sitar master's concepts into his own sound, Indian music has maintained a steady influence on jazz. Drummer Dan Weiss works that influence into his repertoire in a wholly unique fashion, however, taking on the challenge of transcribing compositions for tabla — the Indian hand drums — onto a full drum kit.

"I try to get the flavor of the composition while maintaining a jazz sound," Weiss says. "I've tried to create a different language for myself that would enable me to improvise and feel sound and rhythm in a different way."

A rising star on the modern jazz scene, Weiss has played with the Village Vanguard Orchestra, legendary saxophonist Lee Konitz and Ravi Coltrane (John's son) along with many of his most innovative peers. Since 1998, he's studied with Indian tabla virtuoso Pandit Samir Chatterjee, whose influence, Weiss says, has been "vast, to say the least. It shaped a lot of who I am as a musician."

A Social Scene that's anything but Broken

There are more than 25 people who can say they have been members of the band Broken Social Scene. For the past decade, this Toronto collective has churned out glorious bursts of indie rock and pioneered the movement of having so many musicians onstage that it can be difficult to figure out who is producing what sound. BSS alumni have included members of Metric and Ms. "1234" herself, Feist. Drummer Justin

Lifetime membership

Peroff recounts with a laugh that in the early years of the band, one member wanted to actually quit: "We were like, 'Dude, what are you talking about? You don't have to quit. You can always come back.' We're like, 'You do your thing. Give us a call. We'll be right here.'"

Peroff, who has been a full-time member since 2002, says being part of the band is a lifetime membership.

"The revolving door of existing family is absolutely always open," he says. "That is exemplified in the last few local Toronto shows and there was the movie that documented one of them, and that was called 'The Reunion Show' by some bloggers, but it wasn't really a reunion show. Those people are always there, and we're always creating and having brunch together."

Getting so many people together to record isn't always easy, which is one reason why there are only four albums officially credited to Broken Social Scene, including last year's "Forgiveness Rock Record," which they are still touring behind. But Peroff says BSS found a remedy in releasing remixes of material from that album.

"In this day and age of Internet culture, when you release an album you generally want to create awareness, and a lot of how music is being listened to and shared these days is basically on a news-feed on a blog," he says. "That's one way of communicating with your fans, so if you pop up on a newsfeed and you have an annex project to your record, like a remix series, you keep that awareness alive."

WEEKEND, SEPTEMBER 9-11, 2011

Books in honor of 9/11

Ten years after the tragedy of Sept. 11, 2001, a slew of books based on the attacks, the aftermath and our slow recovery has arrived for the anniversary. From analytical essays debunking some 9/11 myths to intimate letters showcasing the collective experience of the survivors, the words are all penned in honor of the fallen victims, in celebration of the human spirit and in remembrance of everything that Americans have lost and gained since the day that changed the world.

NICHOLAS LIM
letters@metro.us

"The Legacy Letters"

Brian Curtis
From the non-profit organization Tuesday's Children comes a collection of letters that are simply poignant and deeply personal. These letters are written by family members of those killed on 9/11, as they share their lives and experiences since that tragic day when their loved ones were taken away from them. A decade has passed, but the love, longing and memories swathed within these words are still as strong as they can be, and these letter-writers have shown us how they have not just "moved on, but moved forward" as well.

"Reluctant Hero"

Michael Benfante and Dave Hollander
As the towers burned and people were trying to make their escape via the stairwell,

Michael Benfante unknowingly became a hero when he carried a wheelchair-bound woman from the 68th floor to the ambulance. His heroic act became a household story, but Benfante is telling his own narrative, and it is one that is intimate, conflicted and astonishingly honest.

"Project Rebirth"

Dr. Robin Stern and Courtney E. Martin

Written in conjunction with the documentary "Rebirth," this work continues to explore the lives of survivors in the days following the tragedy. Combining the experience of Stern as a psychoanalyst and the journalistic expertise of Martin, "Project Rebirth" examines the haunting and crippling effect of the aftermath and the eventual journey toward healing. The book features eight compelling profiles that remind us of the human capacity for recovery and how these individuals mustered the courage to carry on.

"Debunking 9/11 Myths"

Edited by David Dunbar and Brad Reagan

In the years after 9/11, many fanciful theories of the attacks have surfaced, with some pointing to the idea that it was the U.S. government that had sanc-

"A Decade of Hope"

Dennis Smith, with

Deirdre Smith
"A Decade of Hope" is Smith's follow-up to his best-seller, "Report from Ground Zero." Unlike its predecessor, it focuses on the families and friends of those who were lost in the events of 9/11, narrated through the experiences of the 25 interviewees. Filled with a decade of reflections, dreams and hopes, the book pays a timely tribute to the victims of the tragedy.

tioned the attack. This work came about with a strong intent to refute these ideas, starting with an in-depth investigation by Popular Mechanics magazine. The 2011 edition includes five new myths that have emerged in recent years.

It's easier than pie

► What do you do with a kitchen full of orphaned apples that you're strangely attached to? ► Break out the loaf pans and cinnamon — it's apple bread season

TERESA DARLINGTON ROCKS

► Apples, welcome to the afterlife.

It began as a simple, earnest project — most projects that involve pies probably do — on the weird and windy day after Irene blew through Philadelphia. We would use all of the apples from the downed tree in my parents' backyard because, even though they weren't the prettiest or even tastiest apples, she had been a good, shady tree and a friend to many birds, squirrels and children in need of a hiding spot. Pies seemed to be the only proper burial, and intricate woven crusts the only appropriate topping.

A few days and too damn many pies later, the apple tree was back to being just a tree (a rather wimpy tree with truly unimpressive fruit), and we were in need of apple-gobbling, low-fuss, counter-clearing recipes.

This quick bread turned out to be the answer. It mixes up in one big bowl, freezes well and is very forgiving of swaps, add-ins, extra apples and overcooking.

If you can't find pock-marked, ungrateful little apples from Northeast Philly, any tart baking apples — or whatever variety you haul home from a fall orchard trip — should do just fine.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
monica.weymouth@metro.us

Weekend recipe

Hurricane quick bread

What's in it:

- 3 cups of flour (not whole wheat)
- 3 tsp. of cinnamon
- Shaves of fresh nutmeg
- 1 tsp. baking soda
- ½ tsp. baking powder

- A good pinch of salt
- 1 tsp. vanilla extract (almond is nice, too)
- 3 cups peeled, chopped apples
- 2 tbs. cream (or more; just enough to bring the dough together)
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- 2 cups sugar
- 2 eggs

Optional: A generous handful of raisins, dried cranberries or nuts

How to make it:

Put everything in a large mixing bowl. Mix. Now really mix — get your hands in it. Once the dough comes together (it should be dry-ish), divide it into two very well-greased (or else!) loaf pans and pop those into a 350-degree oven. Bake for 45 minutes without peeking, and then let sit for a few minutes before transferring to a wire rack to cool.

Hand sanitizer never looked so good

'Contagion'

Director: Steven Soderbergh

Rating: PG-13

Grade: ⓈⓈⓈⓈ

Can a bowl of peanuts be terrifying?

In the case of "Contagion," absolutely. Early on in the thriller, when you know Gwyneth Paltrow's character is infected with a deadly, contagious disease that she's about to unknowingly unleash onto the world at large — and then director Steven Soderbergh shows her reaching into a bowl of bar peanuts at a Hong Kong casino before boarding a flight — you think about trading in your first born for a squirt of Purell.

► Oh God, no Gwyneth, don't blow on the dice! Not the dice!

Soderbergh's direction is slick and horrifying, and his use of a ticking out-break clock, global population figures and the best-of-the-best cast (Matt Damon doing a convincing suburban dad impression in Minneapolis, Marion Cotillard at the World Health Organization in Geneva, Jude Law as a conspiracy theorist in San Francisco and Laurence Fishburne at the CDC in Atlanta, among others) keeps up the energy.

But because everything is so global in scope, he can't cram everything he needs to within the two-and-a-half-hour running time; needed details toward the end are swept over, and the movie peters out along with the virus.

But that bowl of peanuts? Some of the best work from a legume since Mr. Peanut donned a top hat. ● DOROTHY ROBINSON

THE RUNDOWN

► Metro's guide to what's happening in Philly this week

There's a lot to see at Live Arts, and there's even less time to do it. But you won't be sorry for fitting "WHALE OPTICS" into your weekend. The latest from the always dynamic, always witty Lucidity Suitcase Intercontinental is the tale of a composer traveling the world to study humpback whale songs. No, really. If you can just trust us on this one, that'd be great. Through Sunday, The Prince Music Theater, www.livearts-fringe.org

We dig this one for an almost-fall Wednesday evening, especially with opener William Elliott Whitmore.

We got relief from our uterine fibroids with UFE — Uterine Fibroid Embolization.

Heavy Periods? Pelvic Pain? Frequent Urination? Constipation/Bloating?

You might have uterine fibroids

Uterine fibroids are non-cancerous tumors that grow on or in the muscles of the uterus (womb). At least 35 percent of women in the U.S. have fibroids. African American women are more likely to develop fibroids.

Uterine Fibroid Embolization (UFE) is a safe non-surgical alternative to hysterectomy.

Hey LA, where's the gas station parking lot that has the food trucks? Is it open right now?

► @HankAzaria

Actually have a break on the set of the new NBC show I'm shooting. Which I choose to fill by tweeting, apparently.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Tale of the fighting ovaries

Now that the Reality TV Wedding of the Century™ is over, what kind of drama will the Kardashians think up next? No, not trying to see who can do the most community service, or fighting over who can leave the smallest carbon footprint — that would be crazy! Instead, it looks like sisters Kim and Khloe Kardashian are involved in a "fertility battle." Because, really, why wouldn't their ovaries be dueling?

Yes, a "pal" tells Us Weekly: "Khloe is having major problems getting pregnant." A "show insider" echoes this by saying, "If Kim were to get pregnant first, that would cause tension, because it would highlight Khloe's struggle." Yet another friend says, "There is some friction now because Khloe knows [Kim's pregnancy] is the next step, and she feels terrible she can't get pregnant herself. The competition has really got her depressed."

Yeah, I'd be depressed if all of my "pals" and "friends" called up tabloids to squeal on my "fertility" issues, too. But really, I hope they both have happy, beautiful babies. And then they create a line of Dash diapers, which, of course, will come bedazzled.

Hudson's sell-out dad

Bill Hudson, Goldie Hawn's ex-husband and Kate Hudson's estranged father, has some stories in his new book, "2 Versions: The Other Side of Fame and Family" — and chances are Kate won't be too thrilled about them. "She has done stuff which is just awful," Bill writes, according to Radar Online. "She is a spoiled brat in my eyes." He claims Kate hasn't been in touch with her grandmother, who is battling Alzheimer's. "Kate doesn't have to give her a dime. All I want is for her to call and say, 'hi grandma,' before it's too late," he writes. In her defense, maybe Kate did call and grandma just forgot.

Simpson: Utterly untrue

Jessica Simpson heard the reports that she's planning to get a breast reduction in advance of her upcoming wedding, and she's not too happy about them. The voluptuous singer took to Twitter to clear things up. "Been getting lots of questions about this alleged breast reduction," Simpson wrote. "Not to worry. I love my boobies! They aren't going anywhere!"

Paltrow: 'We're flawed'

Gwyneth Paltrow isn't judging her friends that step out on their spouses — but she's not keeping quiet about it, either. "Life is complicated and long, and I know people that I respect and admire and look up to who have had extramarital affairs," Paltrow said while doing promotional duties at the Venice International Film Festival. "We're flawed. We're human beings, and sometimes you make choices that other people are going to judge. That's their problem, but I think that the more I love my life, the more I learn not to judge people for what they do. I think we're all trying our best, but life is complicated."

Cyrus: Be true to yourself

Miley Cyrus is trying to come to terms with the extreme views others have about her. "People have very mixed opinions on me. I'm a great role model, or I'm completely inappropriate for anyone under 13 and I am controversial. I don't know how I became this," she tells Prestige magazine. "It's weird. Two complete extremes. I'm not some crazy lady who's gone off the deep end, because I definitely haven't."

"AUGUST: NO U.S. TROOP DEATHS IN IRAQ", UPI.COM, SEPT. 1. The United States invaded Iraq in March 2003. Eight years later, we have experienced the first post-invasion month in which no U.S. military personnel were killed.

Mission accomplished?

By now most Americans have accepted the fact that we were lied into a self-destructive war — a war that has not only failed to achieve our strategic goals but which has also left us less secure, less prosperous and less free than before it began. Yes, most people know this intellectually, but — as we enter another no doubt vicious and protracted election cycle — it bears repeating.

Horoscope

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Working hard and giving a job all that you can might not be enough to accomplish your goal. Fortunately, you'll have Lady Luck helping you.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. It behooves you to try to make a game out of a tedious job that you're trying to complete. It'll take the edge off of the boredom, especially if you get a friend to help you out.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. When helping another, treat what you're trying to do earnestly and place importance on it, even if you have no stake in it. It'll make you look good in the other party's eyes.

Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. We all, upon occasion, find ourselves in need of a good sounding board. If you have an issue weighing on your mind, discuss it with a friend.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. A major objective that you've been finding to be far more difficult to accomplish than you had expected might suddenly get completed, owing to new forces becoming involved.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Although you might be faced with a situation similar to one that gave you fits previously, you learned from it and can now use the same tactics that proved to be successful before.

Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Why would you settle for the status quo when your destiny is in your own hands? Take charge and implement whatever changes you feel would improve your life.

Aries March 21-April 19. Give a friend the benefit of the doubt when things aren't adding up the way they should. Until you know differently, trust what your pal has to say about a delicate issue that affects you.

Taurus April 20-May 20. You're in a good achievement cycle in terms of your ambitious objectives. Now is the time to take on that special project that, when completed, will make life a whole lot easier.

Gemini May 21-June 20. Letting the one you love know how much she or he means to you isn't likely to be accomplished by words alone, but by how you act and what you do. Deeds say more than words.

Cancer June 21-July 22. It takes dedication as well as skill to excel to capture the win. If you're more determined to take the crown than the other person, victory can be yours.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22. If you've been falling short on accomplishing a major goal, perhaps it's time to bring in someone who has certain skills you lack. Chances are that collectively it can be done.

NFL 2011 PREVIEW

5 Eagles who must thrive

1 Casey Matthews
Linebacker
6-foot-1, 231 lbs.
Rookie, 4th round

► Why: Handing the keys — and headset — of the defense to an untested rookie is a bold move, especially on a unit with at least six new starters. We know Matthews possesses the pedigree — well-documented, by now — but he was often gobbled up by blockers in the preseason. Jim Washburn's "wide-nine" technique will put the onus on Matthews to stop teams from the dink-and-dunk.

2 Rodgers-Cromartie
Cornerback
6-2, 182 lbs.
4th NFL season

► Why: The challenge here is to simply get DRC on the field — in some capacity. He is the quickest of the Eagles' trio of cornerbacks and flashed his athleticism by blocking a field goal two weeks ago. He and Nnamdi Asomugha were often swapped in the slot on nickel looks, which seemed to confuse the opposition. Rodgers-Cromartie has the potential to be a game-changer, but he'll have to take advantage of snaps.

3 Todd Herremans
Right tackle
6-6, 321 lbs.
7th NFL season

► Why: It isn't a given that Herremans will succeed here. He hasn't played much tackle since college, but the coaching staff is banking on his high football IQ and supreme athleticism. Besides, they were out of options with the injury to Ryan Harris and sloppy play of King Dunlap, and they desperately needed a steady vet to protect Mike Vick's $100 million blind side.

4 Juqua Parker
Defensive end
6-2, 250 lbs.
11th NFL season

► Why: The oldest Eagle stands to benefit the most from the team's free agent spending spree. Remember, the 33-year-old reeled off four sacks in the first three weeks last season before hitting the wall. Of course, that has been his MO in recent years. Since 2007, Parker has 24 sacks, but 19 of those have come on or before Nov. 15. There are plenty of snaps to go around in Juan Castillo's scheme, with its frequent shuffling of defensive ends, and that should keep the elder statesman fresh.

5 Jason Kelce
Center
6-3, 282 lbs.
Rookie,
6th round draft pick

► Why: We hate to state the obvious, but it's kind of hard not to here. He beat out incumbent starter Jamaal Jackson (and sent Mike McGlynn packing) because he's a better fit for offensive line coach Howard Mudd's system. OK, fine. But the coaches also put the weight of the "Dream Team" on Kelce's slight — for a lineman anyway — frame. We'll know if Kelce can handle it after the first two games, both in obnoxiously loud domes. ● METRO ► Coleman is one of six new starters on defense.

Changes, changes and more changes

- Question marks linger with linebackers, safeties
- Castillo not worried, feels defense is ready to go

Six new starters. A rookie in the middle. And a novice calling the shots.

This is the 2011 Eagles' defense.

Coming off the shortest offseason in NFL history, the Birds have a great deal of unknowns on both sides of the football. But trying to gauge the new-look defense might be one of the hardest to figure out.

Former offensive line coach Juan Castillo is the new defensive coordinator. He'll start a rookie MLB, Casey Matthews, and will pair a journeyman strong safety, Jarrad Page, with second-year free safety Kurt Coleman.

Some would be worried.

On TV Sunday

Eagles at Rams,
1 p.m. (FOX)

Some aren't Castillo. The coach said he worries more about his two sons doing well in college than he does about calling his first defensive game.

"If you have kids, you understand it," Castillo said. "Really, my goal, and I've said it before, is that this is the first step in the process of what we're trying to do here, which is to bring a championship to Philadelphia."

The first stop on that Super Bowl tour bullrushes through St. Louis, a team on the rise. The Rams boast the reigning rookie offensive player of the year, in quarterback Sam Bradford, and an elite rusher in Steven Jackson.

"For anybody, I think the first thing you want to do is stop the run," Castillo said.

The way Castillo sees it — in a shortened season — it might all come down to conditioning.

"The teams that are in the best condition are the one who will be able to win games," Castillo said. "At least in the first three or four weeks, until everyone is able to get even as far as being in shape."

Metro's NFL Power Rankings

► Green Bay retains the top spot ► Eagles in at No. 7
► Can Falcons live up to hype? ► How about Patriots?

1  PACKERS
(10-6 LAST YEAR)

They bring back the NFL's best quarterback, Aaron Rodgers, its top defensive star, Clay Matthews — and get all-world tight end Jermichael Finley back. It's tough to repeat in this league, but the Packers' stability will carry them far in this shortened season.

2  PATRIOTS
(14-2)

Tom Brady and Co. are going to score a ton of points, especially with the addition of Chad Ochocinco. That's the easy part. If Bill Belichick can unlock Albert Haynesworth's enormous potential, the Pats could be hoisting their first Lombardi since 2004.

3  FALCONS
(13-3)

Most talented team ON PAPER. Atlanta upgraded its pass rush and O-line, and drafted a shiny new toy (Julio Jones) for Matt Ryan to play with. They also will get slot receiver Harry Douglas for a full season. Now, Ryan must prove he can win a playoff game.

4  CHARGERS
(9-7)

Philip Rivers looked like an MVP candidate in the preseason, with the attitude to match. With better special teams play, the Bolts are a legit contender.

5  STEELERS
(12-4)

Did little to fix a secondary that got torched in the Bowl. Still, they return 20 starters from a team that came one drive short.

6  JETS
(11-5)

Rex Ryan guaranteed a Super Bowl victory at the NFL combine. Love or hate Ryan's bravado, guys like playing for him, and his teams always contend. This year will be no different. It's on Mark Sanchez to take the next step.

WWW.METRO.US
FOR MIKE GREGER'S
FULL POWER RANKINGS

7  EAGLES
(10-6)

Mike Vick and the Dream Team. That spells championship, right? Maybe. But the Eagles have six new starters on defense, a new coaching staff and an untested O-line. This is either going to be Andy Reid's greatest or worst coaching job yet.

8  SAINTS
(11-5)

Even with Drew Brees chucking a career-worst 22 interceptions, Who Dat Nation was still dangerous last season. With the addition of thunder-and-lightning duo Darren Sproles and Mark Ingram, watch out.

Is chronic low back pain a strain in your life?

Have you been suffering longer than 3 months? If so, Lifetree Clinical Research in Salt Lake City invites you to call and make a complimentary appointment with our specialized pain physicians to discuss research options available to you. This appointment is at no cost to you.

Lifetree Clinical Research is conducting a research study on low back pain. The study includes an inpatient stay at our facility of up to 43 days. Therefore, interested candidates may either have flexible work schedules or not be working at all-although candidates may be able to work while staying within our facility. Travel, activities, catered meals and accommodations are provided. Qualified participants may be provided study medication, diagnostic testing at no cost and be compensated for their time.
